

Media Studies

At Settlebeck school, our Media Studies curriculum is designed to inspire, challenge, and empower students to become critical thinkers, discerning consumers, and proficient creators in the ever-evolving landscape of media. Rooted in the belief that media plays a fundamental role in shaping our understanding of the world, our curriculum aims to equip students with the skills, knowledge, and analytical tools necessary to navigate, critique, and contribute to this dynamic field.

In Media Studies our curriculum intent is to provide a dynamic and enriching learning experience that:

- promotes digital literacy
- encourages creativity and expression
- explores diversity and representation
- develops transferable skills
- cultivates global citizenship
- fosters independent research and inquiry

Through this curriculum, we aim to empower students to navigate the complexities of the media landscape, fostering a generation of informed, critical, and creative individuals who can contribute positively to society.
